

Austin Cambridge

For all I know I am thinking of the Morris Oxford, its terrible twin, not to mention its misbegotten MG, Riley and Wolseley siblings. This bunch of cars shows where our motor industry went wrong. The previous (bulbous) Morris Oxford was not a bad thing for its age. Friends of my parents and, I am ashamed to say, one of my friends had a Cambridge. It is hard to credit that Farina's basic design, which produced the Peugeot 404, was the one which we Brits bastardised into these misshapen models. No wonder the French still make cars and we hardly do.

© Roderick Ramage 31.xii.2003