

Bugatti 57

Modest, retiring types would settle for a touring bodied type 40, but by almost every standard the type 57 is the acme. Bunty (aka David Scott-Moncrieff) would sell any car in sight, but not his wife's 57, which she kept in a spare bedroom (their steep drive passed hard by the house). If you are suddenly startled by the appearance in your mirror of big headlights flanking a horseshoe radiator and, behind them, goggles, leather helmet and red lipstick, followed the flash of a low slung blue body with light blue wings and chassis, you have been overtaken by her daughter-in-law.

© Roderick Ramage 8.v.2016