

Humber Super Snipe

My father's second car after the war was an ex-army Humber, called Two Ton Tess. I can remember its registration number, DXT 956, but have no idea of my present car's number. The most exciting things I remember were Father grabbing Mother when the front suicide door burst open, when the windscreen on the passenger side shattered and when father returned late one winter night having left the car on someone's hedge. My mother loved the long bonnet, because you had to push so far into the road to see if it was clear, that other drivers had to give way.

© Roderick Ramage 30.xii.2003