

King Lear

Three in one does not work if two of your girls, Goneril and Regan gush their false protestations of love and you mistake the modest response of the youngest, Cordelia, who truly loves you, and disinherit her. She marries the King of France. Lear becomes mad with grief and is sent to Dover to meet Cordelia and the French King, who has come to his aid. The French are defeated and Lear and Cordelia condemned to be hanged. The two other sisters and other intriguers die from poison or cold steel. Lear enters bearing Cordelia's body, collapses and dies beside her.

© Roderick Ramage 11.iii.2016