

Romeo & Juliett

"For never was a story more woe than this of Juliet and her Romeo."

The Montagues and Capulets end their feud, but only after Romeo took poison on seeing Juliet for dead and she, on, awaking and finding her Romeo lying dead beside her, took his dagger from his belt and plunged it into her heart. He, a Montague, saw her at a masked ball and, in Capulet's garden, declares his love for her, and she, on a balcony, for him. They were married in secret. Two other deaths, a miscarried plan and a drug induced coma led to the end.