

Rover 3.5-Litre Coupé (P5B)

The official model was a mess. The roof, glasshouse and slender window frames were fine. The body from the waist down, ie the standard body, was fine. The two parts failed to gell and the car looked disjointed. Besides what were they thinking of with a 4-door coupé? Well, there is an answer and it is called ADM 849H. I ignored the Sainsbury's Christmas shoppers and rushed to chase it on foot. The owner stopped and told me he bought it from a man, who converted it to 2-door, lengthening the front doors and moving the B-pillar back. It looked fabulous.
