

Titus Andronicus

Titus returns to Rome from his campaign against the Goths bringing Tamora and her three sons. The sacrifice of her eldest to Titus' sons killed on campaign starts revenge and counter-revenge, ending with Titus serving her a pie made of her two remaining sons then killing her, whereupon he is killed by the Emperor, who is killed by Lucius, Titus' last son. In between two sons of Tamora had killed the emperor's younger brother and raped Titus' daughter Lavinia leaving her without tongue or hands and two of Titus' sons were beheaded. Titus killed Lavinia out of mercy. Lucius becomes Emperor.
