

Vauxhall Cavalier

When I was very small, my aunt had the newest and best in small cars, a Morris Minor MM, but her last purchase was a Vauxhall Cavalier. Vauxhall had recovered from its foray into knee banging over-wraparound windscreens and gaudy colours, but then there was nothing left. While my aunt's legacy was restoring my Empress, we used her Cavalier as a stopgap, and you really could not really fault the convenience of its pas and automatic box. Although this was designed in Luton and the Vectra in Rüsselheim, the design and marketing principles were unchanged, and Jeremy Clarkson was spot on.

© Roderick Ramage 2.i.2004