

Volkswagen 411 Estate

We must have sold my aunt's Cavalier (perhaps jaded and bored to bits), because I also ran a big VW estate while the Empress was still eating into my cash reserves. This was a car with a boot at each end. I do not think that the rest of the family was very impressed by it and it was particularly unreliable, but I still have a soft spot for it. It might have been the challenge of keeping it going as a family car, but more likely it was just the idea of running something that was clearly obsolete when new.

© Roderick Ramage 3.i.2004